COMMENDATION.

To thee all knees must bend,
To thee all heads must bow ;
Known to all, the student's friend—
The Athens of Mississippi, thou.

From out thy halls, grown old,
Full many a man has passed
Who wrote on memory's scroll
A name that long will last.

Thou spring of knowledge flowing
From Mississippi's soil,
Thy wealth of praise is growing
By dint of scholars' toil.

We love thee ; yes, we love thee,
Our Alma Mater dear,
And when at last we leave thee,
Our hearts will linger here.

CAMPUS VIEW

OUR CAMPUS.

The chilling blasts have passed us by;
The gentle Spring greets us with cheer;
A panorama fills the eye
That looks upon the views now here.

The artist's hand, so deft and skilled,
And with imagination's aid,
Were weak to please the soul that 's thrilled
By beauty such as here is laid.

Though fancy's ideal high may be,
If bound by earth's or nature's views,
No grander sight her eye can see,
Nor grander scenes her wishes choose.

The pink horizon in the East
Is brightened by the rising sun;
The shadow of the night has passed,
A cheerful song of birds begun.

The grass an emerald carpet rare,
And rich with diamond dew-drops bright,
Aglow with brilliance everywhere,
Creates a most imposing sight.

The weeping willow's graceful bow
To huge, gigantic, stately oak,
Salutes the squirrel seated low
As he, in glee, chats with his folk.

The sky, a canopy of blue,
With grace, is bent above the scene;
The sun beholds the brilliant view
And smiles upon this plot of green.

At last, but greatest of it all,
The Co-Ed. comes, so fair and bland;
Upon this scene dark shadows fall
And leave it for the artist's hand.

S. LAMAR FIELD

Reaper's Song.

The sunlight breaks across the waste
And lights the purple-shadow'd fen :
Oho! my reapers, reapers wake
And swing the scythe with me again!

What though to merchants be the gain
And labor starve, to fatten trade?
To richen us the golden sheaves
And music of the clanging blade.

What though the money make the man,
And conscience knuckle in to wrong?
To us the majesty of toil
And God within the sunrise song.

So up, my reapers, with the sun,
And follow me across the fen :
Oho! my reapers, reapers wake
And swing the scythe with me again.

History of the Runt Club.

THE historian is glad to say that this session is especially prolific of Runts. One can scarcely turn without jostling against one of this species of mankind. Last session we were seventeen in number, but we were not well organized and did not get our picture in OLE MISS. This session we are strictly in it; a full house and a jolly set!

Before telling of the illustrious deeds of the present session, we will spend a short while discussing the "absent ones." First, let us say, we have lost our two "Kids." "Kid" Ricks and "Kid" Oliver—a sad calamity to the Club. The most Runty man ever in attendance at the 'Varsity, Runt Wallace, is gone, gone, gone; and poor Nick Nash, the stammering Runt, who was doomed to many years in the Law Department, but fled, fled, fled—he too is among the "missing"; and "Little Willie" Garrard has stepped down from such a pedestal as the 'Varsity students stand upon, and has pledged his faith with the potato plowers, goober grabbers, and cow chasers of the Agricultural and Mechanical College; and Johnnie Dorroh has broken ranks; "Daddy" Jones, our dear old bow-legged "Daddy," has put out his attorney's shingle in the faces of giants; and Jamie Dyer—where, oh, where is he? We are unable to trace him further than Columbus, and then we lose him! And last, but saddest to relate, we were forced to expel Charlie Phillips—dear Charlie—but he grew more than a quarter of an inch in one session, and the law must be enforced!

Now about the present session: We are here in full force. We expect to give a Runt dance, we will put a Runt Baseball Team on the field and, in fact, we are going to show the world what Runts are able to do when they combine! We realize that we are an oppressed people; but combination gives strength, and we are out for our rights. Beware to him who seeks to thwart our purpose.

There was some talk of electing our Chancellor to honorary membership, because of his smallness of stature, but after a heated discussion we decided that, although Chancellor in every way deserved the honor, we had better refrain from electing honorary members.

Hi! Hi! Hi, Rock and Rye!
University Runt Club!

OFFICE OF
ROBERT C. DRAYTON
ATTORNEY

VICKSBURG, Miss., Jan. 25, 1902.

MR. V. OTIS ROBERTSON:

DEAR SIR: In reply to your favor of the 18th, I will say that I am pleased that "OLE Miss" has not forgotten one of its most luckless alumni, and while I do not feel personally able to produce anything of sufficient interest to be preserved, yet I can prove the adage that truth is stranger than fiction by sending you the letters enclosed, which I received some years ago while I was absent from the University. You may be able to find some one who can work them up into a readable story.

In explanation I will say that during my first three years at the University I roomed with Allen Thornton, and I can truthfully state that a bigger-hearted, more innocently sincere fellow, I never knew. The fourth year I dropped out, and secured a position as commercial traveler which took me to Oxford occasionally. However, my duties were such that I was enabled to keep up a correspondence not only with Thornton, but with one or two others of my special friends, one of whom, I am happy to say, is now my wife.

The letters I enclose tell their own story, which is of an incident which caused no little talk at the time. I have cut out such matters as were strictly private or of temporary interest, and my wife has superintended the emendations of her own epistles, allowing some parts of them to go in under protest, however. But as I tell her, we were all young and silly once.

If you can use these in any way, you are at perfect liberty to do so.

Wishing the Annual and its editors all success, I am,

Very sincerely,

ROBT. C. DRAYTON.

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Sept. 25, 18—.

MY DEAR DRAYTON:—

Pardon me for not having written sooner, but you know how the opening of school is. Your letter was a great surprise to all of us, for we were counting sure on you for this year, and we needed you bad the last two weeks. But so much the better for next year's class; they needed some solid timber, for they were dreadfully sophomoric last year. Smith and Tommie Lowe, and "Bones," and that lot, you know. They are all back.

We have a new man in the Senior Class—transferred from Vanderbilt. His name is Maurice Patrick—but you know him; he said he met you at the convention last year. He's Irish, of course, and a jolly good fellow, lively as he can be. I think we are going to be great friends. He's rooming with Thomas in Calhoun Hall. Mightly little stndying they'll do, I'll warrant.

Oxford is the same old place—same old sidewalks, same old dust, same old dark nights, same old profs., and same old girls—God bless 'em! Wouldn't the University be a howling waste without them? Pat and I and Thompson and Marion went calling Sunday, and Pat is dead stuck on the girls. We called at Wilson's and Ross's and Gardiner's and one or two others. Of course, I had been at Wilson's before—next day after I got in. She's sweeter than ever, and I don't mind telling you, old boy, but I think she likes me. But I reckon I'd better not get started on that subject. I know you would rather talk about Miss Gardiner. I asked her when she had heard from you, and she said Mr. Southwell had brought a message a day or two ago. We teased her a bit, but she wouldn't admit she heard from you direct. Pat says he's struck on her, himself, so take fair warning.

School is getting on fine; Dr. Deupree has a new joke, and I hear Prep. has four girls in the Soph. Physics Class; so he is happy.

Football is pretty slow. It's most too hot yet to practice much. But I must stop now and go to work. Write soon and come this way as often as you can.

As ever,

ALLEN THORNTON.

(From Miss Gardiner, who is now my wife.)

OXFORD MISS., Sept. 27, 18—.

MY DEAR MR. DRAYTON:—

Your sweet letter and box of fruit came this morning and they were so delicious. Thank you so much for your thoughtfulness. You always were such a dear, and I don't know what we girls are going to do without you this year. The only promising substitute I see is a new man from Vanderbilt, a Mr. Patrick—a very good-looking, tall, fair-faced young fellow, with such a sweet smile. He says he knows you—he met you at the World's Fair. I did not get just the straight of it, for the room was full of boys. He is a regular Irishman, full of fun and compliments. I think I am going to like him. But here I am singing another man's praises when I ought to be thanking you for that fruit. So consider yourself thanked and possess your soul in patience till

I have time to write another longer letter, which will be soon if you are good.

Sincerely,

ALICE GARDINER.

(From W. T. Bixbee.)

UNIVERSITY, Oct. 5, 18—.

DEAR DRAYTON:—

Sorry I missed you Sunday, but was out calling with Patrick. He wanted to go early so as to get to see Miss Wilson before the crowd got there, and make a date for church. He is quite gone on her, I think, though he doesn't say much about it. I met them out walking down South Street the other afternoon. I was with Thornton, and Pat looked a little confused. I'd hate to see him cut Pat out. * * * * *

I've got fifty pages of law to get up to-night, so I know you will excuse this short letter. Let me know sooner when you come next time.

Your friend,

"BRICKS."

[This was "Bricks" Bixbee, and his letter gave me considerable relief from the fears which the two preceding ones had aroused, and which a visit to Alice on that Sunday had not entirely removed.—DRAYTON.]

(From Thornton.)

UNIVERSITY, Oct. 10, 18—.

MY DEAR OLD FRIEND:—

Your welcome letter just received, and I will stop work long enough to scribble a sort of answer. I'm dog-tired to-night, as I've been moving to-day. Thomas has gone up town, and Pat invited me to come over and room with him. He didn't mind paying the double coal fee, he said, but he wanted company. He has his room nicely fixed up and with what traps I have we will be pretty cozy, though he says it isn't half as nice as the one he and Lord Kelvin's grandson had year before last. Just think! He has roomed with a future English Lord! How he happened to be studying in this country he didn't say. I suppose to learn American methods. Pat is a very interesting talker, and you ought to have heard him in the French Class the other day talking about the Alps.

He has been all over them, last summer, with a party from St. Louis, who spent the whole summer there. I understood him to say the other day that he was out in Yellowstone Park on a geological expedition last summer, but I must have misunderstood him. When I asked him about it he said it was the summer before. I wish I had had the chances he has had to travel and see things. He has been most everywhere.

I'm afraid we won't have much of a football team this year. I'm trying for half-back, and Pat for right tackle, but he won't make it. He is too light. I want him to try for quarter, but he says Cole has a cinch on that.

* * * * *

Pat and I have just received an invitation to tea at Mr. Wilson's Sunday. Pat is to bring Miss Gardiner and I am to stag—just us four besides the old folks. It will be a good chance to talk to Mary. It is going to be warm, and the gallery is long, you know.

* * * * *

So long, this time.

ALLEN THORNTON.

(From Alice.)

OXFORD, Oct. 14, 18—.

* * * * *

Mr. Patrick and I took tea with Mary (Miss Wilson, you know) Sunday night. Mr. Thornton was there—just us four. Supper was very pleasant, but after supper Mr. Thornton was just as cranky as could be. You know he is usually very lively, but I had to work hard to keep up a conversation. We were out on the porch, and Mary and Mr. Patrick were having a jolly time laughing and chatting away. Poor Mr. Thornton must have been jealous—you know (of course, you do) that he used to be with Mary all the time. I hope he and Mr. Patrick didn't murder each other in their beds that night. They are room-mates, so Mr. Patrick said, and I haven't seen either one since.

Sincerely,

ALICE GARDINER.

UNIVERSITY, Oct. 13, 18—.

MY DEAR BOB:—

Tell me something for the blues, old man. I've got 'em bad. You know that tea at Mary's I wrote about. Well, that scoundrel of a Patrick carried her off and talked to her till it was time to go home. I guess Miss Gardiner thought I was a most awful bore, but I was hurt, for I told Mary before that I wanted to speak to her particularly, and then she deliberately let Pat carry her off. Hang it all, old man, I may as well own up. I reckon you have known it before, but I love her, and

I can't hold in any longer. I was going to tell her that night. Of course, I can't blame Pat, for he doesn't understand the situation, though he did say he was going to cut me out. Evidently she let him monopolize her to keep me off. Do you reckon she loves me? You've been through the mill yourself before, old man; tell me what to do.

ALLEN.

[I had a time explaining that last sentence the other day when my wife saw it.—DRAYTON.]

UNIVERSITY, Oct. 25, 18—.

MY DEAR DRAYTON:—

You are a guardian angel. I took your advice, and she was just as sweet and tender as she could be. Of course, I can't tell you about it all, for it is too sacred to share, but she would not say yes or no, but only that she liked me very, very much, and to wait awhile. That's something, isn't it? I'm pretty sure that means yes in the end, don't you? God bless you, old man, for urging me on. I was too blue and cut up to ever have tried it on my own hook.

I'm too happy to write much, so good-bye. I knew you would like to know, so I wrote this short note.

As ever,

ALLEN THORNTON.

(From Alice.)

OXFORD, Nov. 30, 18—.

MY DEAR MR. DRAYTON:—

Mr. Thornton delivered your message yesterday, and I am so much obliged both to you and to him for your thoughtfulness. He was looking happy as a lark, and when I asked him what it was he smiled mysteriously—but I saw a bright diamond glittering on a certain girl's hand when I met her at Neilson's this morning, and $2 + 2 = 4$.

Mr. Patrick is still quite attentive—in fact, she is working them both to a finish, though I do think she thinks a lot of Mr. Thornton. But I oughtn't to say such things, and I wouldn't if it wasn't just you. Don't you dare breathe that I think so.

* * * * *

Sincerely your friend,

ALICE GARDINER.

(From Thornton.)

UNIVERSITY, Dec. 2, 18—.

DEAR BOB:—

That Thanksgiving game did the trick. You ought to have been there, for it was glorious. I got laid out near the end of the first half, had the doctor at work for about half an hour, but am all right now. They put in Thompson, and he made a 90-yard run for goal—just my luck! I might have had that, if I hadn't been laid out. But there's no loss without some gain. I got about half a dozen messages from Mary while I was getting over my hurt. She was there with Pat, and he guyed me a lot—said she nearly fainted and wanted to go to me. So she must love me, don't you think? She said she did Sunday night, anyway. Wouldn't a honeymoon just after Commencement be nice? Of course, this is all confidential, old man.

I told her Pat said he was going to cut me out, and she said he was welcome to try as much as he pleased, and with that she—I guess you can guess what she did. God bless her, she's the dearest thing that ever happened. So Pat is welcome to cut away all he wants to. I think I'm not too jealous-hearted to mind it. She made me promise not to tell anybody, so I can't kick if he does offer his attentions, though she says she does not like him. He is most too flip sometimes. He made her kiss him the other night on the bridge. It was moonlight and warm, and they were out walking. He threatened to jump off if she didn't, and, poor thing, she thought he meant it. But she sawed him off the next time—one night when he tried to put his arm around her and kiss her. When she told me that, I wanted to go hunt him up and thrash him, but she wouldn't let me. She said she could take care of herself, and she taught him a lesson about kissing he wouldn't soon forget. Jove! old man, those ruby lips of hers are enough to set any man crazy. I don't want to have any falling out with Pat, so I suggested that she endure him as long as she could, and then throw him down hard.

You remember Dr. Deupree's crane story? Pat heard him tell it the other day, and told another version, and the class just yelled. He said—

UNIVERSITY, Dec. 10, 18—.

MY DEAR DRAYTON:—

Can't you come and spend part of the holidays with me on father's Belle Isle plantation? Lots of game in the swamp, plenty of pretty girls in town four miles away, and enough wine and cigars on hand to make the odd moments pleasant. Won't you try to come? Pat will be there, and Holmes, and maybe Thornton, though he says he has to stay at the University and work. I think he means stay in Oxford and spoon. They have an awfully bad case.

We are right at the beginning of exams., so you can understand I'm pushed. Cramming is mighty little fun, especially when you have as much of it to do as I have.

Let me know at once if you can come, and believe me,

Your friend sincerely,

W. T. BIXBEE.

P. S.—My cousin, Miss Leroy, of New Orleans, and a friend, will be at home for the holidays. I know you will be pleased with her. Pat knows her already—met her at Monteagle last summer.

(From Alice.)

OXFORD, Jan. 1, 18—.

DEAREST ROB:—

That looks funny, doesn't it? But it is a good beginning for the New Year, and I'm glad I've written it. It sounds so much nicer than "My Dear Mr. Drayton." You dear old goose, I was beginning to be afraid you were tongue-tied or something—but now I'm so happy. Any just think, my ring has an ever so much bigger diamond than Mary's, and I know Mr. Thornton is perfectly able to get her a pretty one. He stayed here Christmas just to be with her, and I saw them together nearly every day. It is common talk that they are going to get married, and I guess gossip is right for once. But maybe you know more about it than I do. You and Mr. Thornton were such good friends. How about it, sir? Come, 'fess up.

There was such a pleasant man here from New York Christmas—a Mr. Seymour. I went driving with him one afternoon, and he—oh dear, here comes a caller.

Mary Wilson has just been here with a perfectly lovely solitaire she said Mr. Patriek sent her Christmas. I asked her about the other one, and she laughed and said she could wear them both—they were neither of them engagement rings. "No such luck," she said; but I have my suspicions.

You must think I'm awfully mercenary to be talking of nothing but diamonds, when I might be talking about something more interesting. Well, dear, I * *

Your own,

ALICE.

(From Thornton.)

UNIVERSITY, Jan. 6, 18—.

DEAR BOB:—

I know you must have had a good time at Bricks's plantation. Pat says they are just elegant entertainers, and he found you such a fine fellow. He was bragging about Miss Leroy, whom he had met before at a Rex ball in New Orleans. I believe she lives there.

I had a dull time here—at work all the time, with an occasional call on Mary. She is a dear girl, and loves me dearly. Pat has given up cutting me out, I guess.

He doesn't say much about her any more. I think I told you about his saying he roomed with a lord in Vanderbilt. I thought he was lying, but he wasn't for once. His name is Seymour, and he is in business in New York. He was here Christmas to see Pat, and of course missed him. I met him at Mary's. I remember she said she met him at Asheville several summers ago.

My eyes have been bothering me a little lately—too much work. Twenty-one hours is too much for any one to carry, and I wish I hadn't missed the rise that time in Soph. Math. along with you and Carter and the rest. I can't study much at night any more—the types get to jumping about and everything gets twisted and big, and they ache so. Why, the other night Mary's ring was flashing in the firelight, and I started to look at it, and it seemed as if it had grown a lot. I thought for a moment it was another stone, but Mary said it wasn't. My eyes do play me such tricks. Did you ever have a girl kiss away the pain when your eyes ache? I tell you it is worth having the ache for. I guess I will go to Memphis and have them treated.

As ever,

HON. ROBT. C. DRAYTON,

Attorney-at-Law:

Dear Sir—Your most unwelcome note at hand some days ago, and I hasten to relieve Thornton's exchequer of its surplus to enclose the ten. I had been trying to forget to remember about it, but there's no cheating the lawyers—and other horned folk. The Saints preserve us!

I've been rolling the memory of that Christmas dinner at Bixbee's plantation under my tongue for a month. I don't think I ever can forget it—nor the divinity that sat at my right. I nearly lost my heart.

But that ten is rankling. Surely you ought not to be so ungentlemanly as to ask a man to pay back what he borrows. I've a good notion to cut you out of the girl you left behind you here in Oxford, just to pay you back. I went to the ball the other night with her, and she's a queen. Here's to the man who wins her; so beware.

If you don't get this, let me know, and I'll write another, but I won't guarantee to replace the ten, unless Thornton has heard from home.

Till death, your own true—

(Let's cut that out. I forgot who I was writing to.)

MAURICE PATRICK.

The Gamma Rho Beta ball the other night was a grand success. Mary was in Memphis, so I took Miss Cooke. You don't know her. She is a Co-Ed., and this is her first year. Pat was playing the gallant with Miss Gardiner. "They say" you and she are engaged. It's no fair keeping mum that way, when I've told you all my troubles. Pat is a little cool toward Mary now. I asked her if she had thrown him down, and she told me sharply it was none of my business, and then came and begged forgiveness so sweetly. Jove! I don't see why everybody isn't in love with her.

You had better watch Pat, though.

As ever,

DEAR BOB:—

"While the cat's away the mice will play," so if you want to keep me from going with any respectable man I take a notion to, you had best be on the ground and make a "previous." No, sir; I won't promise not to, and I think you are a mean, jealous-hearted creature.

Mr. Patrick is nice and pleasant, and I can love you without shutting myself up in a convent to keep the other men off. So there, now. Put that in your pipe and smoke it.

DEAR BOB:—

I'm in the dumps again. Can you help me? It's all about Mary. She went to Memphis again the first of the month to shop and visit some friends, and last week when I finished my exams., I thought I would go up, just to have my eyes examined, you know. I walked up Main street, and who should I meet but Mary and Pat! And they took it as coolly as could be. The rascal left two days before I did, and said he was going home. He is the biggest liar that ever struck the University, and I've stood the limit. We have got to quit rooming together. As for Mary, I've a good notion to call it all off, too. I was so mad that I turned around, went down to the I. C. depot, and came home by way of Grenada. Tell me what to do.

ALLEN THORNTON.

UNIVERSITY, MISS., March 25, 18—.

DEAR BOB:—

It is all right again. I took your advice and called as soon as I heard she was back. She sent word she was not at home. That made me mad, but I swallowed my pride, and went up the next afternoon, and, as luck would have it, caught up with her just as she was going in at her gate. It was the luckiest thing in the world, for she told me afterward she had determined not to see me. Anyway, she had to ask me in, and—well, the long and short of it is, we settled it. It seems she had met Pat just a few minutes before—entirely by accident. Pat tells the same story, so it is all right.

OXFORD, April 10, 18—.

DEAREST ROB:—

Thank you so much for the flowers; they were so much nicer and fresher than some Mr. Patrick sent yesterday, though he brought his from Memphis himself. He had been up to see Joe Jefferson, and wanted me to go—with a chaperone, of course—but I thought of you, and wouldn't. Wasn't that good of me?

You remember last month when you were here he was trying to revive his case with Mary Wilson. Well, gossip may be wrong after all. She seems to like him better than she did before. She is such a flirt, though, you can never tell where she is. He leaves me alone now. Of course, he comes once in a while with flowers or candy, or such like, but he isn't trotting at my heels like he did a month or so ago.

DEAREST ROB:—

We had such a delightful picnic Saturday. There was just a small crowd—Annie Spencer and Mr. Bixbee, Rose Cooke and Teddy Martin, Mr. Patrick and Maisie Wolfe, Mr. Thornton and Mary, of course, and Tommie Lowe and I. There were just enough to make it pleasant, and we had lots of fun till nearly dark, when Mary had the bad luck to step on a pebble and fall, wrenching her ankle. It was so sudden that we were too startled to do anything, but Mr. Patrick rushed forward, picked her up in his arms, carried her to his buggy, and drove off to the doctor, leaving Mr. Thornton to take care of Maisie. I felt sorry for him, and yet I had to laugh, he looked so comical and woe-begone at being cut out that way.

With love, ever your own

DEAR BOB:—

At last the end is in sight; my thesis is in, and I have an average in the neighborhood of 84. Pretty good for a blockhead who has fooled away as much time as I have, isn't it?

But the important thing is that Mary and I are to be married Commencement night, and lead the german.

I want you to be my best man. Pat and Bricks will be the other two. I suppose you heard of Mary's sprained ankle. It was just wrenched a little, and though it is a little weak yet, it is usable. I hope she won't have to limp during the ceremony.

OXFORD, MISS., June 6.—One of the greatest surprises that this town has ever experienced was the marriage last night at the Methodist parsonage of Miss Mary Wilson to Robert Marjoribanks Seymour, of New York. Invitations had been issued for her marriage to-day to another young man, a member of this year's graduating class at the University, but the little blind god ruled otherwise. It seems that Miss Wilson met Mr. Seymour, who is a younger son of Viscount Seymour and a grandson of Lord Kelvin, of the English peerage, at Asheville, N. C., some summers ago, and they became engaged. An estrangement took place, and they drifted apart until last Christmas, when he came to Oxford upon other business, and accidentally met her. However, she was at this time engaged to another young man, and Mr. Seymour's pleadings were in vain. But when the invitations were issued he determined to make another attempt, and pressed his suit so successfully that they are now on their way to his grandfather's estates in England for their honeymoon.

TO MY LADY, SLEEPING.

Summer is come, my lady ; meads are drest
With daisies, and to-night the heavens above
Are blue and far ; hear how the turtle-dove
Calls to his mate upon her quiet nest ;
E'en so, with my poor lute, I would arrest
My lady from the fields where she doth rove
In dreams, to tell my heart of love
And sing the sweetness of my lady's breast.
While I do wonder if her yellow hair
Rains down, as yesterday, my kisses, there,
And amorous moonbeams, silver fair, repose
Where yesterday I hid a crimson rose
That should upon my lady's bosom keep
My kisses warm, when she doth lie asleep.

Hightower (whispering to Wright).—"Say, Wright, is Joe Jefferson a horse?"

Manly Leavell (New Year's night, as the bells are "ringing out the old, ringing in the new").—"Fire! fire!! fire!!!"

P.—"What 's the matter, Manly?"

Manly.—"Don't you hear those bells ringing? There 's a fire somewhere! Come on!!!"

MISS ISOM.

Miss Sarah McGehee Isom.

Instructor in Elocution and Oratory.

MISS ISOM was born in Oxford, Mississippi. Received her earlier education in her native town, and later attended the Augusta Seminary, Staunton, Va., from which she graduated. Returning to her home, she took a course in Belles-Lettres at the University of Mississippi. Early in life Miss Isom showed traces of her remarkable genius, and desiring to continue the study of her chosen profession, she entered the Philadelphia School of Expression, the first Southern woman to study in the schools of oratory in the East. It was with pardonable pride, then, that Miss Isom heard this expression from the lips of her instructor, James E. Murdoch, as he handed her her graduation papers: "You are the brightest and most eminent pupil I have ever instructed; your equal is found in Julia Marlowe, only." Miss Isom continued her studies in Boston, and when, in 1885, the new position of Instructor in Elocution and Oratory in the University of Mississippi was offered her, she accepted. As stated in Werner's Magazine of June, 1900, "she is the only woman holding a regular chair of oratory." Her time from her duties as instructor is spent in study and in travel. She has traveled over the Union and in Europe, becoming acquainted with the foremost teachers of the day and keeping step in the advancement of her art.

The Department of Elocution and Oratory in the University of Mississippi is interesting, elevating, and instructive; the force of Miss Isom's training evinced in every oratorical contest. It is an interesting fact that, to the year 1900, of the 127 medals offered in oratory, 117 were won by her pupils, and that since 1900 her pupils have won every medal offered. In June of 1901, the National School of Oratory, Philadelphia, conferred on her the degree of Bachelor of Oratory.

Accompanying the photograph of Miss Isom are photographs of students of her departments who have been successful in Interstate and Interecollegiate contests.

Miss Isom has read in London, New York, and at various points in this and other States, receiving everywhere just praise of her great talent and high genius.

History of Senior Class.

THE Class of 1902 is perhaps the best class that has ever gone through the University. The Class has taken high standing in all the walks of University life. We have taken more than our share of honors. Nearly every organization of the University has members of the Class upon its rolls. In fact, as a class, we have the best of reasons for feeling proud of ourselves; but we will not enumerate our honors. Our days within the hallowed walls of "Ole Miss" have been spent pleasantly, indeed. Those who entered the Class as Freshmen are but a small part of the Freshman Class which matriculated in the University. Many who matriculated as members of this Class have dropped out, but those who remain feel proud of the Class. Many of the Class of 1902 have not been here four years; but in the time that they have been associated with the University they have done much hard work, and have learned to love this old University with all their hearts. Many amusing things have occurred among us as a class, and we have our full share of nicknamed men. This Class is not lacking in class spirit.

We are going to leave a sign of our class spirit behind us—namely, a memorial arch over one of the driveways of the University. The Chancellor has generously offered to assist us in our undertaking. It pleases him that the Class is helping him to beautify our already far-famed campus, and at the same time leave a lasting testimonial of their class and college spirit. Several members of the Class agitated the question of caps and gowns, but this was voted down. Logical were the many speeches both pro and con; but the majority of the Class believed themselves to be sufficiently dignified without caps and gowns. As we go out from these walls we can not help but speculate as to our future life. We have confidence in our ability, however, that we will eventually "come out on top," no matter what difficulties may present themselves to us. We stand for the uplifting of man, and each of us shall endeavor, to the best of his ability, to solve, not meanly, the many problems now confronting us, and by so doing reflect credit not only upon ourselves, but upon the men who have so faithfully and well blazed out the way, and most especially upon our Alma Mater.

Junior Class History.

THERE is, in the University, a class known throughout the entire school as the Junior Class, or the Class of 1903. If you will but permit your imagination to soar to its remotest bounds, I think that I may be able to give you an idea of the unusual features about this noted Class. No one could possibly form a conception of a band of such intellectual giants of Herculean power except a person of vivid imagination. Just as our Mathematics teacher, who taught some of our comrades a number of years as Sophomore mathematicians—not because it was required of them to go over its thought-provoking pages so much, but because it proved so great an attraction that they could not refrain from its study—I say just as he would tell us that we have to employ the imaginative powers to get a conception of the infinite, so now we would ask that you muster all your imaginative forces in order to view this company of youths of infinite capabilities.

I realize that in order to write a true history it is necessary to give the date of birth and home of the character treated, so I have endeavored to procure this data from the various members of the Class; but I invariably meet with the reply: "Well, really, I have forgotten when I was born, not that it has been so long, as some of our Co-eds go on to explain, but since I have commenced the solution of scientific problems and the unfolding of the intricacies of psychical principles, I have decided to disregard those minor points in my life. As to the place of my birth and my present home, they have been lost to me since I left home, for it is difficult to keep informed as to such small points."

Now, my good friend, if you should see one of these notables wandering in search of the home that he knows not of, rescue him, for some day, when all these classmen, noted for the honor they have conferred on the University by their stay here, shall assume control of our governmental affairs, you may boast that you, upon one occasion, entertained the Governor, the President, or some member of the Cabinet. Be kind, gentle reader, to the members of the Class of 1903, and when we shall lay aside our school duties and discharge the votaries of to-day, who are so kindly holding our offices for us, you will have but to ask what political or other honor you would like, and it will furnish us genuine pleasure to give it to you as a benefactor of the noble.

It grieves us greatly that we have only one more year in which we can look after and care for the University; but, feeling the urgency of the call to come to the relief of the potentates of to-day, whose minds are troubled and brows knitted with the perplexing political questions, we think it our duty to sacrifice the pleasures we might get here and go to the greater positions which demand our immediate attention, lest our Republic should encounter loss. We hope our loss will not be so keenly felt in the University as it now appears. It may be that some other class will emulate the glorious example given them by the Class of 1903 and rise to the unprecedented eminence which we have attained. We trust that will be the case.

Let me, my gentle reader, offer you a word of warning before you close the consideration of our history. It is this: It may be that you will see some Freshman, Sophomore, or Senior who would have you discredit these historical facts which I have related; but let me beg you not to do this until you consult some one of the Class as to the statements which I have made. If you should be inclined to question what any one of them would say, being interested in it, I take pleasure in referring you to the authority on the subject of history, Dr. Riley, who will bear me out in all that I have said. We should not offer this warning, but you know the weakness of the human race to magnify self and to minify others, and besides we have heard so many expressions of jealousy on the part of other classes because of the unprecedented record which we have made and the brilliant prospect which foreshadows us.

So much by way of preface to the history which I was to write, but which I am afraid you have detected I didn't write; but just wait until next year, and we will give you the entire story.

The History of the Freshman Class.

WHEN the University opened in September, and Varsity men were joyously greeting each other with hearty grips, there were seen a goodly number of homesick, though determined, individuals who found themselves objects of curious scrutiny. They were given critical and indifferent stares by the Juniors and Seniors, but that which filled them with fear and trembling was the look of contempt and derision which the self-important "Sophs" gave them.

This band of newcomers soon chose their chums, and it was a proud moment, never to be forgotten, when they were first called College Men.

Ere long a spirit of class loyalty was manifest, and before the second month had passed the Freshmen had a class organization. Notwithstanding all differences of opinion and all disregard for rules of order, the Class of 1905 stands a united band. A whole morning was spent in electing officers, for the votes cast would never agree with the number of men present. Only one other meeting has been held, and of the many motions made, the only one carried was, "That the record of this meeting be not published."

There have been few discords or dissensions to mar the harmony of our career; we have been marching steadily onward, and, in the closing days of the year, winning a record in scholarship worthy to be prized by any class.

Be it known, that they are of a valorous race; and their noble achievements will be written in undying characters, and all too happy will the "Muse of History" be to transcribe their brilliant record. Now that the year's work is done, there is not one shadow to mar the clear blue sky of the Freshman year.

HISTORIAN.

A Freshman Election.

Reader, did you ever chance to pass
The Chapel and see the Freshman Class
Preparing to quietly (?) organize,
Hidden from the view of older eyes?
Well, if you have, there is no need
Of asking you this poem (?) to read.
Full well I know that this is true,
And reader, don't you know it too?
There was never heard more noisy crowd,
No stronger language and shouting loud,
No meeting conducted in a worse way
Than the Freshman meeting, election day.
Of pulling hair there is no end,
And lusty yelling friend for friend;
And you have heard it often told
How that votes are bought and sold.
"Nominate me and I'll nominate you"
(A bargain often made by two);
"Nominate me for president's chair,
I'll help you out when I get there";
Or, "Nominate me for president, 'Mug,'
And I'll nominate you instead of 'Bug.'"
And every Freshman (I'll swear it's true)
Votes for himself, the election through!

Parliamentary law they never knew,
And none of them care if they never do;
The ballot-box they always stuff,
The counted votes are more than enough.
We have heard it sometimes said,
Seniors put such in a Freshman's head,
But such I know can not be true
Of the Senior Class of nineteen two
There is nothing the Senior Class can do
With such a mob—you think so too?
I was satisfied you would,
If you ever understood.
Now take a look at the Freshman Class
Through the window, as you pass;
Look at "Mug," he's lost his head;
"Sleepy" Rogers looks like he's dead;
"Sheeney" Barrett, looking "bad"
And "Bug-house" Powell, a harmless lad;
"Sissy" Priestley, wild and meek,
And "Columbus" Hardy full of cheek;
"Measley" Hardy scared to death,
"Sallie" Flowerree's lost his breath
Trying to raise his voice loud
And make it heard above the crowd;

" Simple Simon " Butler 's there,
 Mouth wide open, that same old stare!
 " Boscow " Enochs 's chewing gum;
 " Puss " Ervin sits there like he 's dumb!
 If I only had the space
 I could lead at a gentle pace,
 And picture many a curious face
 Belonging to this Freshman race;

But time forbids, and space demands
 I leave this task to other hands:
 I 'm sorry that I haven't time
 To tell it all in simple rime,
 But reader if you 'll take a look
 At the present Freshman Class,
 You 'll see it would take many a book
 To describe this Varsity Grass!

History of the Senior Law Class.

SOME one has said, "Happy is the country that has no history," or words to that effect. Judged by this standard, the history of the Law Class of 1902 in this its last year is a creditable one. One familiar with the turbulent record of the Junior Class of last year would never recognize this as the same. The pendulum has swung to the opposite extreme. For copper-riveted, iron-bound, unswerving, unbending, uncompromising, judicial dignity, the members of this Class are the peers of any wooden Indian cigar-store sign. Every act is done in an impressive manner and with due regard for the dignity becoming a Senior Law Student. We don't curl up in our chairs and sleep as we used to. We sit bolt upright and sleep like a church deacon.

On the day set by the Faculty for all class elections, the janitor removed everything breakable from the law lecture-room, and nailed down everything else, in preparation for the coming election. The Freshmen and Sophomores perched in the trees outside the windows at a safe distance to see the sport. The meeting was as calm as a Quaker meeting. We simply decided by resolution that class organizations, as then conducted, were promotive of much discord and of no good, and adjourned without reorganizing, to the intense disgust of the Freshmen and Sophomores; thus setting an example of harmony and good fellowship that has been followed to a greater or less degree by every other class and organization in the University. As a voluntary student organization, our history may be said to begin and end on the day set for the election, but as a collection of individuals our history for the year is, in the main, an unbroken record of things well done. There has never been here a class composed of abler, better men. The average of class work has never been higher, nor the attendance upon lectures better.

Whether or not the Class contains any who will shine and make a noise in the world, it is impossible now to foretell; but this we are sure of—the Class is composed of good men and true, whose influence in life will be devoted to those things that are worth while. (The writer modestly excepts himself from this prophecy, and reserves to himself the privilege of doing anything disreputable that he wants to do.)

JUNIOR LAW

History of Junior Law Class.

THE aborigines of Junior Law must have been fierce people. Tradition seems to be that the Junior Law Class meetings were accompanied with rough words and cruel blows, but aborigines were ever wild and woolly. The present Class shows that the advancement of Junior Law is in keeping with the civilization of the world.

There were fourteen members when the Class was organized. "Twice seven, twice lucky." Since then the Class has steadily increased in numbers, and indications are that it will be larger next year than now.

The Class holds a good portion of University honors. In athletics we have four men on the football team and one on the baseball team. We also have the captain of the track team.

Among our members you will find the business manager of the Magazine, and one of its editors; two of the editors of the Record, one being the editor-in-chief; the manager of the baseball club; secretary and treasurer of the Blackstone Club, for the first term; president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, for the third term; also law librarian.

We have a great many interesting members, but I can only mention a few. First is "Old Rip, Jr.," a lineal descendant of the celebrated sleeper. He has not taken any world-renowned naps, but you must remember that he is young yet.

Second is a very bright little fellow. One night he learned, in a very short time, something about cards, and showed remarkable ability in throwing—an egg. He ought to be a good pitcher.

Third one is a precocious member. He has several cases already—Law, Love, or Beer?

Fourth is a curiosity—a natural-born interrogation mark. The Governor realizes this, and so is patient.

Fifth is the lucky man. He is never called on except when he has studied his lesson, or unless it is dead easy, and he never studies his lessons but once a week. With him is the unlucky man who studies his law nine days out of ten and then gets called on the tenth day when the lesson is real hard. Most of the members of the Class are satisfied that there are days when they would like to be called on, but what days?

We haven't been here very long, so there is not much to tell, but we have been busy since we've been here. So, to be brief and to state the truth plainly, I'll say, "We're here." We've been here since September and will be here till June. We will be here again next year, and after that—well, you will hear from us. But now we are here, and we are glad we are.

THE APPROPRIATION.

It was midnight on the campus;
From beneath the electric glare
In the Chancellor's quiet office
Came three shouts that rent the air.
"What in the name of all creation,"
Said the Dormitory Bums,
"Does this noise mean in the office?
Guess they're using G. H. Mumm's!"
Well, it startled all the natives,
And it scared the prowling cat,
And ran almost distracted
That blue cow owned by Bat.
All the dogs began a barking,
And the horse began to neigh,
And the chickens were a squawking
To scare the coons away!
Then some Sophomore suggested
"Little Brownie" slip around—
"But suppose that I'm arrested?"
"Oh, you never will be found!"
"Oh! oh! man; you must be crazy!
That's no job for little Ike;
Proctor Rivers is a daisy:
He can't chase me down the pike!"
"Oh, you know he'll never catch you;
Go investigate that noise.

The Faculty are raisin' sand
With some one of these lazy boys."
So I slipped close to the window
And looked—yes, only once;
I slipped away in silence.
I felt more like a dunce
Than ever in these many years
That I have gone to school—
I laughed, I screamed, eyes filled with tears
"What's the matter, little fool?"
Ejaculated several Sophs.;
"Don't you laugh so blasted loud;
You'll disturb some of the Profs!"
After several bursts of laughter
I became once more composed.
"Come now, tell us what we're after."
A stately Sophomore proposed.
"Well now, wait a minute,
And this tale to you I'll tell:
Chancellor Fulton's strictly in it;
That's the reason why he yelled.
It is nothing very funny,
Now the fit of laughter's past,
But the Chancellor got the money
That he fought for to the last."

M. H. BROWN.

DUPED.

A maiden fair,
With eyes of brown,
And locks of brown,
Ruby lips and blushes red,
Was sitting by the evening fire,
Was reading by the evening fire,
And what she read was this:

Math. 2, English 2,

Greek 2, Latin 2,

History but a 3.

She leaned a-back and sighed,
A tear came as she sighed.
She fell asleep.

Her parents dear
Had seen the grades,
Had praised the grades—
Their daughter had them duped.
To them a 3 was highest grade,
A 2 was next the highest grade,
A 1 was almost naught.

The maiden slept;
Her parents slept
The sleep of innocence.
Time rolled on.

WITH APOLOGIES TO MAUD MÜLLER.

The Chancellor on a Winter's day
Raked the campus leaves away.

He sent for Bob, and sent for Fred;
The leaves, you see, were surely dead.

"Rake the fallen leaves away,
Sow this grass; we 'll reap good hay."

The Chancellor had the campus plowed;
The mourning trees each sad head bowed.

"We drop our leaves upon the ground,
To keep the warmth and moisture 'round

Our aged roots; protect form cold
And Winter's ravages bold,

And now the Chancellor's laid them bare,
Subjected to the cold and air."

Then wept the aged, gnarled Oak,
When neighbor Hick'ry also spoke.

"Look at the stumps still standing there,
Tombs of our friends, forsaken, bare."

Thereby, reader, hangs a tale
Of this "Studious cloister's pale."

Do not cultivate too well
Your brain; you can not tell

Whether you will rear your head
Or wake up in the morning—dead.

Proceedings of the Editorial Board.

(The following proceedings of a meeting of the Editorial Board of OLE Miss were transcribed from the notes of the Picayune Reporter:)

Editor Price: "Are they all here?"

"No; all but Stephen. He is coming around the corner, and if no one stops him he will get here in half an hour. Every step impresses his 'ego' on the ground."

Meeting comes to order in "regular meeting place," which had been previously made a little more presentable by a few hasty touches of the Co-ed. members of the board. The whole board seemed especially timid. Each one hunted a corner or some obscure place—eccentricity of literary genius. Editor Price in the chair—also in baseball suit. Face very red—too much timidity.

Editor Price: "I suppose all know the object of the meeting. It is (he blushes) to select (he smiles) a design for the back of the front cover."

A dead silence for ten minutes. The thought seems to give Editor Standifer great pain, for he squirms. Editress Rea seems to object to any plan, for her face alternately frowns and refrowns. Editor Beckett, with a half smile, looks vacantly into space and seems to see artistic covers in the distant view. The other editors look down in solemn thought until suddenly, without warning, and with precipitation, Editor Myers exclaims: "Have any designs been submitted?"

Editor Price: "Yes; I had forgotten to mention it. It is suggested to put a spray of cotton-bolls or a silhouette of the Lyceum building."

These ideas are so at variance from an esthetic, sentimental, and practical point of view that it is easily seen that there is going to be serious discussion. It is opened by Editor Robertson:

"Upon a broad principle of right, and in consideration of careful thought, and in view of our best policy, I favor the use of the silhouette of the Lyceum. It would show College spirit, and what does the University need more than College spirit (his favorite theme)? Politics have come near ruining this institution. We have gotten rid of the political tricks, now let us keep clear of their baleful influence by instituting in the minds of the students a patriotic love for everything connected with the College," etc., etc., all tending toward the building of a grand institution.

Editor Standifer: "I do, too."

Editor Beckett looks bored and moves to adjourn, but Editor Price rules motion out of order. Miss Rea seconds motion with a frown.

Editor Myers (who has been sitting looking intently at the floor for some moments): "Mr. Editor-in-Chief, this is a momentous question [Miss Rea frowns and yawns. Miss Burns smiles a little audible, extended smile] upon which we should not take a precipitous expression of the sovereign ballot. While my variegated opinions are not very salubrious upon the artistic handling of brush and pigment, the ponderous weight of my esthetic taste is for the cotton-bolls. You interrogate me: Quo jure? By the inviolable right of sentiment and patriotic love for OLE MISS. The cotton-boll is the recognized symbol of the South and the Magnolia State. What could be more exuberating than to see the spray of cotton-bolls and have represented before the mind's eye the billowing fields of cotton where the pickaninnies pluck with ebony digits the fleecy, feathery down? Then, Mr. Editor-in-Chief, the cotton-boll would be an emblematic representation of the commodity upon which our world-wide industrial importance is founded. Why, the very seeds wrapped in the fibre have become enormous in their latent possibilities; and besides, Mr. Editor-in-Chief, a young lady friend of mine draws handsomely, and she has lately produced with the exquisite touch of her mobile, entrancing brush, a creation with cotton-bolls in the most pleasing of paints—'obiter dictum.' From a mere matter of right, I think we should unequivocally adopt the cotton-boll, but I am content to leave it with the majority—'Fidei commissuier.'"

Editor Stephen (rising with great deliberation, he steps from his seat like an advancing chief justice. Miss Rea gives one more of her delectable frowns. Miss Burns laughs another little laugh, and Beckett twists and straightens up, his lips nearly saying, "I move we ad—"): "Did I understand my esteemed friend to say that he favored the spray of cotton-bolls?"

Editor Myers: "Yes, sir."

Editor Stephen (nods his head, showing a decision after weighty thought): "And yet you have a love for our institution and its welfare?"

Editor Myers (a little excited): "Certainly I do."

Editor Stephen: "I don't see how our fellow member can favor the cotton-bolls. I have listened with no little patience to his fiery and flowery speech, aided by wonderful gestures, and yet I never saw the point of his discussion. As it occurs to me without giving the subject much thought [he never gave a subject much thought; he depends entirely upon technicalities. One of his friends said that if he gets to heaven it will be by means of a technicality in the moral law], I should favor the silhouette of the Lyceum. There are objections, however, to the silhouette. Some one might think the building was painted black. The business manager of last year's Annual said he did not know before Miss Lewis arranged that silhouette that OLE Miss was a negro. With all due respect to Mr. Myers, I must take issue. We in Mississippi have seen enough of cotton-bolls and too little of our Lyceum. If this were A. and M. College preparing farmers, I might favor the cotton-bolls. However, as none of these things are true, I can not approve the cotton-boll idea."

He took his seat with the same gravity as before, as if to say: "Sir Oracle has spoken. Enough."

Business Manager Leavell: "In my vote upon the question I am not actuated by any of the motives assigned by the gentlemen who have preceded me. I am looking out after the dollars and cents side of this publication. The cotton-bolls will be cheaper, therefore I favor it. I was in Memphis the other day and, without expecting to, spent an extra amount, and hence can risk very little." (He did not explain his trip to Memphis, but it is told that he attended an auction sale, to help the auctioneer out, so he says. He was bidding for fun and had to pay for a lot of silver spoons. But then, they say Jim has good business sense. We will not contradict them.)

Editor Price: "I sincerely sympathize with Mr. Leavell, for I too made a visit to Memphis and came near losing my hat and—"

Just here there was a general sense of having left the question, and Editor Standifer moved that the matter be left to the taste of the Editor-in-Chief and business manager.

Myers seconded. It was carried. A silence followed, and Editor Beckett got in his move to adjourn, Miss Rea seconded, and it was carried.

Editor Myers tried to hold the meeting a little longer "to explain certain inaccuracies of speech," but while he was leading up to the subject the whole board dispersed, leaving him still explaining to a responsive post.

What One Young Man Did

TWENTY years ago a young man, who was then twenty-three years of age, took out an endowment policy in the Equitable for $1,000, and paid the first year's premium, $47.68. Every year since then he has paid a similar amount, until altogether he has paid and, by so doing, has laid away $953.60. A small amount to save in twenty years, you will say; but it is made up of small sums that probably would have been frittered away if he had not been compelled to save them on account of this policy.

¶ This year, after enjoying the protection of $1,000 for twenty years, his policy matures, and he may himself draw the $1,000 in cash. : : : : : : : : : : :

¶ But this is not all. In addition to the face of the policy, the policy-holder may now receive his share of the surplus profits amounting to $462. The total result to him is a return of all his premiums, together with a fair rate of interest. If he prefers life assurance to cash, he may (subject to the usual conditions) take a fully paid-up policy for more than three times the amount he has paid in premiums. : : : : : : : : :

What in the world to give a friend?

College men know and the New Haven Union says, apropos of term-end with its good-byes:
"The question of what in the world to give a friend at parting seems to have been solved by the publication of—which is alike suitable for the collegian of the past, for the student of the present, and for the boy (or girl) with hopes;
